Dear [Friend's Name],

Hey there! I hope this letter finds you well and in high spirits. I thought it would be fun to write to you in English, our shared language, and catch up on things.

First of all, let me say how grateful I am to have you as a friend who can also speak and understand English. It's incredible how we can connect on a different level and explore new horizons through language. I must admit, our conversations in English have not only been enjoyable but also a great way for both of us to improve our language skills.

Speaking of language skills, I wanted to share some of my recent experiences and hear about yours as well. Have you been practicing your English in any particular way? Perhaps you've discovered some interesting language learning techniques or had exciting conversations with native English speakers? I'm eager to know how your journey with the English language has been progressing.

On my end, I've been immersing myself in English literature and movies, trying to enhance my vocabulary and grasp the nuances of the language. It's been a rewarding and enlightening experience so far. If you have any recommendations for books, movies, or even language learning resources, I would love to hear them.

Aside from language learning, let's not forget about our shared interests and experiences. Remember when we traveled together? Those moments were priceless, filled with laughter, exploration, and unforgettable memories. I believe our ability to communicate in English has played a significant role in making those adventures even more enjoyable.

So, my friend, how about we plan our next adventure? Let's discuss our dreams, goals, and travel aspirations. I'm excited to hear about the places you'd like to visit or the experiences you're eager to try. Who knows, maybe we can embark on another unforgettable journey together!

In the meantime, I want you to know that our friendship means a lot to me, and being able to communicate in English adds an extra layer of connection and excitement. Thank you for sharing this language journey with me. I'm always here for you, ready to have meaningful conversations, share laughter, and support each other every step of the way.

Wishing you all the best, my dear friend.

Take care and talk to you soon!

Warm regards, [Your Name]
